Transforming era of advertisements in the FMCG sector: Government introduces new guidelines to prohibit misleading advertisements and endorsements

Did you also believe in those ads claiming their products to cure Covid-19 when the world was dealing with pandemic and the medical fraternity was clueless on remedies for such virus? Well, maybe most of us did! What made us believe in it was the advertisement which was false and misleading. This blog is not just about Covid-19 advertisement. There is a legal angle to it.

The Central Consumer Protection Authority (CCPA) in its response to many such misleading ads in the market has notified the 'Guidelines for Prevention of Misleading Advertisements and Endorsements for Misleading Advertisements, 2022' in June 2022. In this blog, we will be going through the applicability and highlighting the key points mentioned under the guidelines, along with the actions taken by the CCPA to curb such advertisements and the penalties which can be imposed for violation of such guidelines.

Adhering to these guidelines requires careful observation of each requirement, otherwise it might pose a risk to your organization. If you want to mitigate such risks, there is a clear need to comply with them, and adherence to such requirements demands organizations like yours to upgrade to Compliance Management Solutions...Read the blog.
